No flag but the Old Flag—the Red, White and Blue,
With the stars of a Union unbroken and true!
Arise and defend it! ye sons of the brave,
Whose blood bought the banner your valor must save.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 6, 1864.

THE WEEKLY OREGONIAN.

THE WEEKLY OREGONIAN is published this morning. It contains the latest telegraphic news from the East and California in detail, a selection of the best articles published in the DAILY OREGONIAN, and the corrected Market Reports. This number contains the full testimony of Page, States' evidence in the Magruder Murder Trial, with the sentence. The amount of reading matter contained in the WEEKLY OREGONIAN is greater than that published in any other journal in the State, and we aim to make it the most reliable newspaper, especially in regard to that which pertains to Oregon interests.

Terrible Grievance.

The peace Democrats up the valley in some of their recent conventions have started a new notion or put a new plank in their crazy and worm-eaten platform. They resolve, with the windy pomposity for which they are famous, that they "announce the order requiring claimants to pay an extra fee for certificates to land claims, as unjust and without the authority of law, and designed only to benefit the office holders at the expense of the people."

Well, what of it? Suppose it is unjust, why did not the Democratic member from Oregon, while the bill was pending in the House, explain the facts and save his constituents from the hardships imposed by its provisions. No other State was so much concerned, and probably very few members ever heard of our Donation Law, or understood that claimants were entitled to their land on making proof of the required residence and cultivation. How easy for our Democratic Representative to explain the matter, and save the people from the tax imposed upon them. We cheerfully admit that the law ought not to have been made applicable to Oregon or Washington, so far as Donation claimants were concerned; no Democrat can disapprove it in that form, more heartily and decidedly than old Union men do, and we should be very glad to have it repealed, in respect to such claimants, and the amount paid by those whose title to their claims was legally vested, refunded to them, if they wish it. In some instances, the payment was doubtless a hardship but certainly it never was so intended. The purpose of the law was to make the land offices support themselves, so far as possible; that was all right, except where the faith of Congress was pledged, that the land should be given for a consideration already paid and performed. In such cases, the pay of officers should have been so provided by the Government as to have spared the claimant the burden which he is now compelled to bear. In this matter, Democrats cannot make any issue with us, and if they wish to blame any body for what was probably an oversight, they had better send for Col. Shiel, and ask him why he did not stop the oppressive action of Congress, or at least, lift up his Democratic voice in tones of remonstrance against the attempt to rob the poor farmers of Oregon! The effort to make political capital out of this law is simply ridiculous, and will come back like a boomerang upon those who try to use it.

DEMOCRACY.—The Ohio Statesman recently thus daguerreotyped its style of Democracy:

> The Democratic party must not only stick together, if it would benefit the country, but it must pursue such a policy as will draw all men of conservative views, not now acting with it, into its co-operation and aid.
> As to what policy it will pursue when it obtains the control of the Government, is a question we have urged time and time again, can only be properly decided when the Abolitionists are expelled from power, and honest constitutional men have succeeded to the administration of public affairs.

What a platform! The Democratic party to succeed, must have only one principle—stick together! No avowal of policy—no avowal of principles—no declaration of purpose or as to the duty of patriots in the present crisis, and which reddens the land with war but only stick together, beat the Abolitionists, be anything, believe anything, declare anything and do anything, that will keep the party together, and bring it into power.

SEEKING THE INSIDE TRACK.—Our exchanges from Northern California state that energetic men are at work for the construction of a road from Red Bluff to the Boise mines. It is proposed to locate it through Shasta Valley, and by way of the Klamath Lakes. It is insisted that a good stage road can be made, which will greatly save time and the cost of freight. We hardly think so, but doubtless the effort will be made to find a route, competing with that by the Willamette and Columbia River Valleys; if it succeeds, the travel from Northern California and Southern Oregon will leave this region, and unless lively enterprise is manifested, it is possible that the proposed railroad may go off in the Klamath direction. It would be well to consider this matter, before it is too late.

STATE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—The semi-annual meeting of this most useful organization will be held at Corvallis on the 16th inst. and will continue in session for four days. Lectures will be delivered by several gentlemen, and discussions will take place in regard to topics that may directly and practically promote the advancement of the State in education. We hope there may be a general attendance of teachers and parents, who cannot but be deeply interested in the progress of the Institute.

AN ELOQUENT LETTER.—Bishop Rosecrans of the Catholic Church, wrote the following admirable reply to a request that he would furnish an autograph letter for the benefit of the Great Western Sanitary Fair at Cincinnati. It will be read with sincere pleasure:

> CINCINNATI, December 8, 1863.
> MY DEAR SIR.—Of course I will give an autograph letter for the benefit of the Sanitary Commission. I could hardly refuse my right arm if it could serve those who may have lost theirs in the struggle for national unity.
> Fifteen years ago last March, I remember standing on the deck of a little French steamer as she was gliding among the shipping into the port of Genoa. I was leaning on the guard, gazing almost vacantly, now at the distant city lying white on the mountain slope, and its back ground of snow-capped crest, and again at the bewildering variety of strange looking vessels all around. Suddenly, as we passed a giant man-of-war, she ran up her colors to greet the sunrise, and a thrill shot through my heart as I saw the glory of the morning sunlight stream upon the "Stripes and Stars." It was an unexpected vision of home to me of vast prairies and long lines of railroads, great rivers, crowded cities, green forests, smiling fields, friendly voices and loved faces, that took away all thought of the strange land I was entering; and as an explanatory Italian at my elbow remarked to his neighbor, "The flag of the great Republic," I would not have exchanged my right to say "that flag is mine" for the grandest of the tottering thrones of Europe.
> This little circumstance I might have forgotten, or recalled only to smile at my youthful enthusiasm, if the political struggles of the country had continued, during my life time, to be what they used to be, a squabble for places, under the shadow of the flag. But the cannon aimed by the slave aristocracy at Sumter, in 1861, struck upon the chord that had slept for years; and when the flag was trailed in the dust by those who had been so prosperous and too favored under its protection, it flashed upon me, as upon all the Northern people, that our wealth, our vast resources, our prosperity and liberty, are nothing without our flag. So I heard the rallying cry in cities and towns and along the country roads, and saw the march of men hurrying to defend their own, with joy; and now, when the same men, but changed by exposure, hunger, cold, disease and wounds, are in a condition to be benefitted by me, I hasten with alacrity to their aid. They are the pluck and hope of the nation. The meanest of them is ennobled by the cause he fought for; and in sympathy with them, we honor the virtue by which alone liberty is deserved and perpetuated.
>
> Hoping that God will bless you with success, I am, my dear sir, yours very respectfully,
>
> S. H. ROSENCRANS.
> GEORGE W. MCLAUGHLIN, Esq.

THE REBEL LEADERS PREPARING TO SKEDADDLE.—A letter to the New York Times from Chattanooga contains the following interesting and credible statements as to the sad condition of things in the heart of the South, derived from refugees and prisoners:

> Speaking of the leaders, I have been told by one who, from connection and communication with them, is well prepared to speak on the facts, that it is an indisputable fact that the leaders with whom, when the final crash comes, there will be not even the hope of a future, have hoarded all the gold they could lay their hands on, preparatory to escaping from the country. I have no doubt of this. Hundreds who, though not among the most prominent leaders, have been more or less conspicuous, either as original conspirators or in sustaining the rebellion after it was launched, have already gone to foreign countries, after converting their possessions into ready means. Large numbers are preparing to follow, and it will not be long before the leaders will begin to leave by blockade runners. This I know is the expectation of well informed persons in Georgia and Alabama communicated to the friends left behind—all Secessionists. Refugees from districts in Georgia uncovered by the panic stricken retreat of Bragg's army have come in in considerable numbers within the last few days. They agree in saying that rebels who have never before admitted that there could be failure now confess they do not see in what quarter the star of hope is to rise; while those less sanguine, but more reasonable, confess to the beginning of the end. We here may over-estimate the moral force and consequences of the blow which Grant has dealt square on the front of the Confederacy. We rest our opinion on evidence that is tangible, derived from a variety of sources. Nor is our belief based solely on local deduction, but on what is said by a multitude of witnesses. "Madam," said I to-day to a rebel lady—the wife of a prominent rebel officer, herself highly intelligent and thoroughly informed—"what will be the effect on the Confederacy of this defeat?" "Alas," said she, "I fear it will prove fatal. It would be madness to attempt to disguise the truth. There is but small hope for the cause now. The Federal army is too numerous, it fights too well, is at last in too able hands; while the Confederate army is too small, is too much broken in spirit, is too badly led, to afford reasonable ground of hope that the Confederate cause can succeed. This being so, let the end come quickly and let the agony be over." This, unquestionably, is the sentiment that is creeping into the Southern mind, leaving the rebellion naked of all else, but the desperation of the leaders."

AN INTERESTING DOCUMENT.—The following advice to his country—the original manuscript of which is now in the possession of a gentleman of Washington—was found among the papers of James Madison, many years after his decease:

"Advice to my country.—As this advice, if it ever sees the light, will not do it till I am no more, it may be considered as issuing from the tomb, where truth alone can be respected, and the happiness of man alone consulted. It will be entitled, therefore, to whatever weight can be derived from good intentions, and from the experience of one who served his country in various stations through a period of forty years; who espoused in his youth, and adhered to it through life, the cause of liberty, and who bore a part in most of the great transactions which will constitute an epoch of its destiny.

"The advice nearest my heart, and deepest in my conviction, is that the Union of the States be cherished and perpetuated. Let the open enemy of it be regarded as a Pandora with the box open, and the disguised one as the serpent, creeping with his deadly wiles into Paradise."

PERFECTLY NATURAL.—The official editor of the Standard justifies the Senator, who preferred Vallandigham's election, to that of an Abolitionist! That was to be expected: he toadies to the Senator, and the Senator makes him his mouthpiece to the people of Oregon. We don't think either deserve much credit on account of the community of interest, and we are surprised, if the Senator has as much adroit sagacity, as his friends profess to believe, that he allows himself to be degraded by such defence. It is bad enough to have such political notions, but it is far worse to have old Henry say they are right or justifiable.

THE PITCH BUSINESS.—The great advance of naval stores at the East, has awakened great zeal on the part of manufacturers in California. A correspondent of the Union Record says:

> "Tar, pitch and resin" is all the excitement in this part of the country. Parties have claimed all the trees between the North Fork and West Branch, and they are tapping very fast, pine, oak and all—they're so excited. He thinks some of them will pitch in so far they will find it hard to extricate themselves.

We wish there was a little of the same excitement in this State; it would make some business in localities, that are now very quiet.

A GOOD WORD FROM ENGLAND.—A public meeting was held at the Corn Exchange, London, on the evening of December 9th, which Mr. Leatham, the member from Hudsfield, made the following, among other, remarks on the American war:

> He would invite attention to the topic American, which was the greatest of all upon which he purposed to touch. He considered the [illegible] so much one of great and decisive battles of siege and blockade; and, granting the determination of the North to prosecute it vigorously, he could see but one solution, and that was the complete prostration and ultimate submission of the South. [Hear, hear.] Desperate, indeed, was the plight to which that ruined cause was reduced. Thanks to the firmness of the British Government, the hopes of European aid are withdrawn; the steam rams safely secured which were to have raised the blockade [applause]; mutiny and treason in the camp of the Confederates [hear, hear]; Alabama and Georgia are full of the disaffection; North Carolina almost in open revolt; Kentucky gone; Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas going; half Tennessee gone; half Virginia gone; Maryland gone; New Orleans, the greatest city of the Confederacy, in the hands of its enemies; Charleston, the cradle of the rebellion, bombarded; Richmond in danger; starvation everywhere [hear, hear]; gold and [illegible] nowhere [cheers]; the paper dollar worth just as many pence as it purported to be worth shillings; the remaining sustenance of the people in the hands of gamblers and sharpers, immense hostile armies advancing on every side, and occupying one after other those military positions which must eventually command the whole country [hear, hear]; the courage and determination of the North rising from day to day in proportion as they saw the struggles of their victim grow feebler and feebler—where was there in all that a single ray of hope for the South, or a single drop of consolation for her supporters in this country? ["Hear," and applause.]

WHERE NOW ARE THE HEBREW CHILDREN.—Not where they once were, ground down in thousands by persecution and intolerance. No longer the Jew only found among old clothes, second hand brogans, and cast off haberdashery. Since the commencement of the present century, the children of Israel have played a hand in the great game of all nations, second to no other people on earth. Who is the most powerful man in the world at this present writing? Not Louis Napoleon, or even the Autocrat. No! King, Emperor, potentate, but a dark-eyed son of the patriarchs, Rothschild, the Banker, the wand of whose wit affords the "sinews of war" to half the crowned heads of Christendom. Who organized that mysterious Russian diplomacy that so alarmed Western Europe a few years since? The descendants of Moses, Aaron and Malachi. Who is driving that mighty revolution, which is at this moment shaking the Empire of Russia, and making the crowned heads of the continent feel as if they were on a volcano? We answer, the sons and daughters of Jerusalem. Who are at the head of the principal universities of Europe? The late Russian Minister of Finance, the great Mendizab of Spain—the late prime Minister of France, Walewski. Who were Marshal Soult and Massena? Jews, Jews, every one of them. Who are the most opulent merchants of New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago, &c.? They are a thrifty economizing people. But very few of them are ever found in the Alms House. From whence come our warblers, whose the Terpsichores of this generation, and who are Rossinis, Meyerbeers, and Mendelsohns? The offering of Levi, Jehoiachan, and Eleazer. There is not an operatic company in Europe, not an orchestra from Madrid to St. Petersburg, that is not crowded with the voices of Hebron and Gethsemane. Almost every great composer, skilled musician, almost every voice that ravishes the world with its witchery, your Pasta and Grisi all sprang from the root of Jessie, all come from the tribes that once peopled the plains of Gaiseed, Bethphage and Salem. As a philanthropist, we rejoice at these things; they indicate that the world has taken a wide stride toward common sense and humanity. They indicate that no longer is a knowledge of the true God spread among the children of the promise, with consecrated faggots and divine gridirons.

PAPER WITH THE JAPANESE.—A writer in Blackwood's Magazine says it is wonderful to see the thousand useful, as well as ornamental, purposes to which paper is applicable in the hands of the Japanese. He states that he saw it made into materials so closely resembling Russian and Morrocco leather and pig skin, that it was difficult to detect the difference. With the aid of lacker and skilful painting, paper made excellent trunks, tobacco bags, cigar cases; and he even saw and used excellent water-proof coats, made of simple paper, which did keep out the rain, and are as subtle as the best Mackintosh. The Japanese use neither silk nor cotton, silk, nor cotton handkerchiefs, towels nor dusters; paper in their hands serves as an excellent substitute. It is soft, thin, tough, of pale yellowish color, very cheap. The inner walls of many of the Japanese apartments are formed of paper, being nothing more than painted screens;—their windows are covered with a fine translucent description of the same material; it enters very largely into the manufacture of nearly everything in a Japanese household; and he saw what seemed to be balls of twine, but which were nothing but long shreds of tough paper rolled up. If a shopkeeper had a parcel to tie, he would take a strip of paper, roll it quickly between his hands and use it for the purpose; and it was quite as strong as the ordinary string at home. In short, without paper all Japan would come to a dead lock; and indeed, lest by the arbitrary exercise of his authority, a tyrannic husband should stop his wife's paper, the sage Japanese mother-in-law invariably stipulates that the bride is to have allowed to her a certain quantity of paper.

CHARLESTON.—The Mercury thus describes the jolly effects of the shelling in the city:

> It is curious, as well as gratifying, to see how coolly our citizens take the Yankee shelling of the city. The people go to and fro in the streets very much as usual. The ladies do not forego their usual promenade; and when a shell falls, the crowds gather about the sullen monster, or watch its fragments, with a curiosity which is not in any whit lessened by their sense of danger. The young girls and boys as they hear the whizzing, look up and cry, "There it goes!" or "Here it comes!" with a superb feeling of confidence in Fate, if not with an absolute sense of superiority or contempt. When a house is struck, which is rather a rare thing, they examine the hole and measure its dimensions, and even calculate the rate of progress which the enemy will make in shelling down our ancient city. They say, "At this rate it will require thirty guns, constantly in play for three years, to batter us into a cocked hat."

CHOICE OF DEATHS.—A singular law exists in Utah Territory, granting to criminals under capital sentence a choice of deaths. They may elect to be hanged, to be shot, or to be beheaded. In the case of Jason R. Luce, who was executed at Salt Lake, on the 12th inst., for the murder of Samuel Bunton, the prisoner declined, at the time of sentence, to make any choice, so the presiding judge had himself to determine the mode of execution. He ordered him to be shot, and at the hour appointed, he was taken to the court-house yard, and a volley of five shots were fired at him from the windows of a basement, where the executioners were concealed from view. All three shots penetrated Luce's breast, and he fell over, a corpse.—Call.

RELIEF FOR SUPREME COURT JUDGES.—Senator Harlan's bill for the relief of the Judges of the Supreme Court provides that the President may, at the desire of the Chief Justice or of any one of the Associate Justices who is over 70 years of age, place his name on a retired list, his compensation to be from $4,000 to $6,000, according to the length of previous service. This is a gentle hint to Chief Justice Taney.

The Great Fire at Santiago.

We have mentioned the fact of the terrible Cathedral conflagration, but we find the following comments in a Chili paper, which are deeply interesting. Under the head—"The Offering up of the Evening Sacrifice"—the editor remarks:

> A dreadful visitation has fallen upon us. Truly this is "a day of trouble and rebuke and blasphemy." The voice of lamentation is heard all over the land, the bitter weeping of fathers, husbands and lovers, for those who were the joy and brightness of their life, that refuses to be comforted because they are not.
>
> Hundreds of young girls—only yesterday radiant and beautiful in the luxuriant bloom of the fresh, hopeful spring of life—to-day calcined, hideous corpses, horrible, loathsome to the sight, impossible to be recognized.
> The 8th of December was a great triumph for the clergy of the church of the Jesuits in Santiago. An enthusiastic audience filled every nook. There were hardly any men there, but 3,000 women comprising the flower of the beauty and fashion of the capital were at the feet of the ecclesiastics, very many, against the will of fathers and husbands—but that of course only showed forth the power and might of the Gospel.
> Never had such pyrotechny been seen before—20,000 lights mostly camphene, in long festoons of colored globes, blazed the church into a Hall of Fire—but the performance had not yet begun when the crescent of fire at the foot of the gigantic image of the Virgin over the high altar overflowed, and, climbing up the muslin draperies and pasteboard devices to the wooden roof, rolled forth a torrent of flame. The suddenness of the flame was awful—The dense mass of women, frightened out of their senses—numbers fainting and all entangled by their long swelling dresses—rushed, as those who knew that death was at their heels, to the one door which soon became choked up. Fire was everywhere—Streaming along the wooden ceiling, it flung the burning lamps, hung there, among the struggling women. In a moment the gorgeous church was a sea of flame. Michael Angelo's fearful picture of Hell was there, but exceeded.
>
> Help was all but impossible. A Hercules might have strained his strength in vain to pull one from the serried mass of frenzied wretches who, piled one above another as they climbed over to reach the air, wildly fastened the gripe of death upon any one escaping, in order that they might be dragged out with them. Those who longed to save them were doomed to bear the most harrowing sight that ever seared human eye-balls. To see mothers, sisters—tender and timid women, dying that dreadful death that appals the stoutest heart of man—within one yard of salvation—within one yard of men who would have given their lives over and over again for them. It was maddening—the screaming and wringing of hands for help as the remorseless flames came on; and then—save when some already dead with fright were burnt in ghastly indifference—their horrible agony—some in prayer, some tearing their hair and battering their faces. Women seized in the embrace of the flames were seen to undergo a transformation as though by an optical illusion—first dazzlingly bright—then horribly lean and shrunk up—then black statues rigidly fixed in a writhing attitude.
>
> The fire, imprisoned by the immense thickness of the walls, had devoured everything combustible by 10 o'clock. Then, defying the sickening stench, people came to look after their lost ones. O, what a sight the fair, placid moon looked down upon! Close packed crowds of calcined, distorted forms, wearing the fearful expression of the last pang whose smile was once a heaven—the ghastly phalanx of black statues twisted in every variety of agony, stretching out their arms, as imploring mercy—and then of the heap that had choked up the door, multitudes with the lower parts perfectly untouched, and some all a shapeless mass, but with one arm or foot unscathed. The silence, after those piercing screams were hushed in death, was horrible. It was the silence of the grave unbroken but by the bitter wail or fainting cry. Two thousand souls had passed through that ordeal of fire to the judgment-seat of God.
>
> Heroic acts of sublime daring have not been wanting. Enduring gratitude has been excited in every Chilian heart by the gallant efforts of Mr. Nelson, the Minister of the United States, his countryman Mr. Meiggs and several other foreigners. There were numerous men who defied the fury of the flames to save lives, and some of these died martyrs to their noble hearts. An Englishman or American, it is unknown which, was seen to rush through the flames, to seize in his powerful arms a lady, stride with her a little way, and then his hair in a blaze and choked with smoke fell back into the volcano never to rise again. A young lady named Ovalle, having in vain implored some bystanders on her knees, to save her mother, rushed in and shortly afterwards miraculously issued forth, bearing her glorious load. A young lady of the name of Solar, just before the smoke suffocated her, had the presence of mind to knot her handkerchief round her leg, so that her corpse might be recognized.
> The population of Santiago, so supine and submissive, is fired with indescribable indignation at the monstrous conduct of the priests. The public conscience holds them guilty of the death of all these victims—and particularly the mountebank Ugarte, the inventor of the Virgin's Post Office imposture, because by collecting together all the materials most likely to produce a fire—a countless number of lights, pasteboard scenery and muslin hangings, admitting a vast crowd, and covering the one door, open with a screen, they took every pains to bring about this tragedy. When the fire broke out and people were escaping by the sacristy, they locked up the door, to devote themselves the more undisturbedly to saving their gim-cracks. The list of things saved makes one's blood run cold. What the priest saved, what they have put away in cigar shops and the houses in front are—a gift image, some [illegible], saints, a sacred sopha or two, some books, chalices, silver candlesticks, and a great deal of sacred matting and carpets!
>
> This being the third time that this church has filled our homes with weeping, all with one voice demand that it should never be rebuilt; but the priests, foolishly defiant and despotic as ever, threaten to let off their miserable mediæval pop-guns at those they term "sacrilegious allenators of holy ground." Their audacity has even led them to an attempt to appeal to violence. On the 11th they appeared on the scene to take possession of the blackened ruins and issue public opinion by chanting masses for the souls of those whose bodies they had destroyed; but the sentinels drove them off with the butt ends of their muskets.
> The Government has shown no energy, and one Minister is unhappily a creature of the clergy; but the people, in whose hearts, as having wives and daughters, there dwells an idea of right—something from God, that priests have not yet succeeded in poisoning—have been in earnest, and the Government has had to follow and yield to pressure. The decree has gone forth, and not one stone of that accursed church shall be left on another. The public contempt and horror of these priests, increase with their insolence and inhumanity.
>
> They preach that the irreparable loss of so many of the fairest and most virtuous of Chile's virgins and matrons is a special mercy and miracle of Mary, who wished to take them at once without delay to her bosom. One monster exults openly at that which has stamped eternal grief and horror on our hearts, "Because Chile wanted a supply of saints and martyrs."
>
> Oh, as we write, our eyes fill with tears. Nothing can console us in this affliction; we can think of nothing else but of our loss—of those who never will come back to us. But still there will have ensued some good, if the dark, degrading dominion of the priests shall have melted away in that awful burnt sacrifice, which, laden with the dying breath of two thousand victims, rolled up to accuse Ugarte and his accomplices of murder before the throne of God.
>
> After saving their trash, these specimens of the good shepherds that give their life for their sheep, flew away in company with the owls and bats that infested the ancient walls, except that one priest favored the agonizing victims with his absolution, and Ugarte requested them to die happy, "because they went direct to Mary." They then forsook the scene and in that awful night—when fainting women and desperate men strewed the streets, and writhing forms that a few hours ago were graceful, beautiful maidens, moaned and died in chemists' shops—not a priest was to be seen to whisper a word of Christ's comfort to the dying ear, or hold the precious crucifix before the glazing eye.
> No, not so—for the priest of Nature was there—Woman—a ministering angel in the dark hour tended and soothed as usual—one young lady—God bless her!—tore up all her under-clothing to make bandages, and bound up the wounds as only woman can. All this awful night the only thing that reminded of the clergy was the incessant tolling of bells, about the only thing they could do to increase the horrors of the scene.

HOW IT LOOKS TO OUR NEIGHBORS.—The Toronto Globe says:

A Good Work.—The best item we have noticed this season, from a public source, is the work now going on in the vicinity of the Post Office, under an order emanating from the Street Commissioner. We allude to the cleaning up of that abominable sink hole, the receptacle of the filth of all the street, between Alder and Morrison. With the proper sewerage, Front might be made the prettiest street in the city, but it falls far short of that now. We hail this as the forerunner of coming events, and we trust the good work will not stop with the completion of the present contract. The property holders and adjoining occupants are required to foot the bill. But we imagine they will never grumble at an expense of that kind when they shall receive the benefit of it.

Fast Horses.—"Almost everybody" must have been out trying the "bottom" of their fast nags yesterday. Front street was nearly jammed, part of the time with equestrians—some of the animals trotted, some paced, some run and some backed—occasionally one would "go" at a regular 2:40 lick, and the rotten planking along the street was no terror at all. We watched the fun some time expecting the City Marshal would "nip" some one, but he didn't, and a good time was had all round.

Recorder's Court.—The cases before Recorder McCoy yesterday were disposed of in the following order: State of Oregon vs T. B. Risley and wife—bound over to keep the peace towards all people, in bonds of $500 each, for six months. State of Oregon vs G. A. Noble—continued for trial to-day at 10 A. M. City of Portland vs Wolf & Ellis, Rosenbaum & Kolberg and Isaac Levy; each party was fined $5 and costs, which was paid, and defendants discharged.

Criminal Docket.—In examining the summary of judgments at the Recorder's Office yesterday we were somewhat surprised to see the taste and uniformity preserved throughout that great volume. The Recorder deserves credit for the neat and correct manner in which he keeps his docket; the penmanship is well executed, easily read, free from blots or omissions, and correct in punctuation and legal phraseology.

Willamette Theatre.—The Theatre was well attended last evening. Mrs. Hayne, as Mrs. Haller, played with great feeling, and was greeted with rapturous applause. Miss Goodrich, as the Countess, did remarkably well. Mr. Waldron, as The Stranger, and the other characters, were well represented. To-night a splendid bill is offered. The great five act play Court and Stage and a laughable afterpiece.

Preferred the Plank.—Six loose horses, passing up Washington street yesterday forenoon, took the notion of trying the side walk, and once on it they were not inclined to give it up for the mud again, but so kept on, as far as they found a plank, in spite of the efforts of persons to frighten them off.

Presentation.—Assistant Foreman Skidmore, of Multnomah No. 2, was presented with a handsome pin and a charm, each with appropriate devices, upon his retirement from office. The tokens were received with proper appreciation, and the occasion is remembered by the "boys" of No. 2.

Clear.—The best test of the clearness of the atmosphere is the distinctness of sounds, and we presume very many marked the reverberations of the public school bell yesterday, whom its sound has heretofore failed to reach for a long time. The weather was "as clear as a whistle" all day.

The Steamer Wilson G. Hunt arrived from the Cascades at six o'clock last evening. Mr. West (Wells, Fargo & Co.'s messenger) came down, having in charge a light treasure. A large number of passengers left on the Hunt yesterday morning, in addition to the stock and freight.

Idaho Silver.—We were presented yesterday, by Mr. Daniel Wells, with a few specimens of pure silver, recently assayed in this city, from rock brought by Mr. Wells from some of the rich leads of Idaho.

The adjourned meeting of the Macadamized Road Company is called, to meet at the United States District Court room to-day, at two o'clock P. M.

New Advertisements.—We would invite special attention to our new advertisements this morning, they contain matters of important interest.

A New Road.—Surveyor Hallock was yesterday engaged in locating a new road, running west from the city, commencing at E street.

The Senator arrived at half past three yesterday afternoon, from Oregon City, having a light lot of freight and but 20 passengers.

No Dispatch was received at Salem last evening, and the office at Corvallis was not in a condition to operate.

Capt. Bachman left with a very fair cargo on the Rival, for Oregon City, at 2 o'clock P. M. yesterday.

Official.—The following is an official report of the election of officers of Multnomah Company, No. 2, on Thursday evening. The reports of all the other Companies were published in the Morning Oregonian yesterday:

Foreman, A. B. Hallock; 1st Assistant, Levi Millard; 2d Assistant, A. B. Stewart; Secretary, W. I. Leonard; Treasurer, Frank [illegible]; Delegates, A. B. Hallock, T. A. Davis, E. [illegible]

County Court, Judge [illegible] presiding, will resume its session at 10 o'clock A. M. to-day.

Circuit Court.—On Monday next Circuit Court will meet in this City.

How the Soldier Sleeps.—You would, I think, wonder to see men drop right down in the dusty road, under the hot noon sun of Tennessee and Alabama, and fall asleep in a minute. I have passed hundreds of such sleepers. A dry spot is a good mattress; the flap of a blanket quite a downy pillow. You would wonder, I think, to see a whole army corps, as I have, without a shred of a tent to bless themselves with, lying anywhere and everywhere in all night rain and not a growl nor a grumble. I was curious to see whether the pluck and good nature were washed out of them, and so I made my way out of the snug, dry quarters I am ashamed to say I occupied, at five in the morning, to see what water had done with them. Nothing. Each soaked blanket hatched out as jolly a fellow as you would wish to see; muddy, dripping, half-floundered, forth they came, wringing themselves out as they went, with the look of "wet down" rooster in a rain storm, plumage at half mast, but hearts trumps every time. If they swore—and some did—it was with a laugh; the sleepy fires were stirred up; then came the—coffee, and then they were as good as new. "Blood is thicker than water."—B. F. Taylor.

Effect of Slavery.—De Bow in his Southern Review goes in strong for slavery. Just read the following, and mark its anti democratic spirit:

"The real civilization of a country is in its aristocracy. The masses are moulded into soldiers and artisans by intellect, just as matter and the elements of nature are made into telegraphs and steam engines. The poor, who labor all day, are too tired at night to study books. If you make them learned, they soon forget all that is necessary in the common transactions of life. To make an aristocrat in the future we must sacrifice a thousand paupers. Yet we would by all means make them—make them permanently, too, by the laws of entail and primogeniture. The right to govern resides in a very small minority; the duty to obey is inherent in the great masses of mankind. All government begins in usurpation, and is continued by force. There is nothing to which the South entertains so great a dislike as universal suffrage. Wherever foreigners settle together in large numbers, there universal suffrage will exist."

The Ladies' Sanitary Aid Society acknowledge contributions: From the First Congregational Church, Portland, $11.50; H. W. Corbett,* $; L. M. Starr,* Platt, Fish, [illegible] B. Smith, Edward Meurs, Sach, Mrs. Hiram Smith, $15; Mr. Burrage,* $4; G. W. [illegible]iter, $2; Mrs. DeWitt,* John Anderson, 50 cents each; amount, $133.50. Acknowledged Jan. 7, $3673.35. Total, $806.85.
* Monthly contributions.

Mrs. A. C. GIBBS, Secretary.

As good wine needs no bush, so Houston, Hastings & Co., of Montgomery street, San Francisco, delight to offer the public to those who patronize them regularly. Being undoubtedly the leading house in their line on the Pacific coast, they do not maintain their supremacy without using every effort to deserve it; and the result is that those who patronize them once urge their friends to go and do likewise. The store is always full.

Agency Notice.—Mr. L. P. FISHER is our duly authorized Agent in San Francisco to receive advertisements, and transact business for the Daily and Weekly Oregonian. Office—No. 17½ Washington street, nearly opposite Maguire's Opera House.

Samaritan Lodge No. 2, I. O. of O. F.—Meets every Wednesday Evening, at 7 o'clock, in Brk's building, third story, opposite the Dennison House. Members of the order are invited to attend.

The Dead Alive.

There lived once in Switzerland, a rich bachelor about forty years ago, called Peter Gortz, who had the reputation of being a very pious but rather austere and thrifty man. He kept but one servant, an orphan, whom, as a child, he took to wait on him, and afterwards taught her to write and read, boasting of her fidelity and indulging her as if she were his daughter. He was her only friend. At sixteen, Caroline de Burgh was as comely a girl as eyes need see, with the gait of a peacock, and skin like new milk, but from her silent, almost haughty disposition, the young men called her prude, the young women—fool; though mothers, even of less lowly station, would point her out to their own giddy geese, and cry: "Take pattern by poor Lina!"

Suddenly she appeared to grow timorous and melancholy; and one day, was seen by a neighbor to hurry from her master's house, in fearful agitation. Peter Gortz pursued, but missed her; the neighbors sought with better fortune, and overheard her muttering to herself, "The Virgin forbid that I should be so rash—yet—anything rather than that! I can bear it no longer." This man instantly seized and questioned her on the meaning of these words, but as she only trembled, blushed and, wept, he forcibly led her back to her master, who looked pleased at her return, and, on what she had said being repeated to him, merely laughed out, "I was too strict this morning perhaps, silly wench, don't quarrel with thy second father!" Lina was about to retort, when Peter bade the other leave them. What was this person's amaze when, next morning, his wealthy neighbor ran to him, all affright with the tidings that his house had been robbed of gold and plate, to a large amount, though no locks were broken, and his servant either murdered and concealed, or carried off alive, which seemed most likely, as everything that had belonged to her was missing, and no signs of contention had disturbed her master in the night. The menaces she had used tempted her hearer at once to suspect her, though the loser did not. She must, it was supposed, have taken the road to her native village. Officers of justice pursued that route and overtaking a wagon, whose driver looked alarmed at their appearance insisted on searching it. There indeed they found a female answering the descriptions given them, hidden with her trunk amid the straw. She denied her name, but a sheathed knife was found about her, on which it was graven. "Well," she cried, as if bewildered, "no law can force my return to him." Not heeding her, they lifted out her box. "'Tis heavy enough," said one significantly. "Is it?" she screamed to the driver. This appeal caused them to arrest him also. Falling on his knees, he swore by all the saints that he only knew this girl as having hired him, in the next town, to come privately to a certain house, for herself and baggage; that he had gone, stolen in, moved the box from her chamber to his wagon, where, by another bribe, she had induced him to conceal her. The lid was forced, and at the bottom of apparel, were discovered a sum of money and other articles of silver, bearing the initials of Peter Gortz. In positive distraction Caroline shrieked, "I refused to be his wife, and told him I would leave him. Oh, he threatened to punish me!" "You had threatened, too," said one of her captors, "and now of course, would fain criminate your accuser." "Nay, then, I am lost indeed!" she cried, and was conveyed to the prison of the town she had just left, amid the execrations of its assembled inhabitants, who had never before heard of such a way as her's for requiting an offer of marriage from a superior.

She was tried immediately on her apprehension. Who could bear witness in her favor? Who knew her character as well as Peter Gortz himself? He gave his evidence with extreme reluctance; everything tended to prove her guilt. She was condemned to die without delay, yet the priest who attended her could gain no avowal of the theft; finding her so impatient, he tried all the power of terror on her soul, with but the result of unnerving her for the awful fate she was to meet. I cannot grace my story with a word in praise of her heroism. She begged for time, she supplicated the Virgin to interpose and save her young days, she groveled at the feet of her guards; her shrieks and groans rang from the scaffold, she struggled with the executioner, till even he was half overpowered by her pleading beauty. At last her strength and reason failed. She became insensible. The fatal cord was adjusted, and the poor wretch left to hang for the usually appointed period.

Her body, according to the sentence of the law, was given for dissection. It fell to the lot of a rising anatomist, named Ebreson, who had it conveyed to the wonted scene of his scientific vigils, a large arched cellar, beneath his house, chosen for its coolness; its air was noisome, and its walls discolored; it was lighted from the ceiling by an antique lamp, whose rays fell on the instruments of his labors, and the still more terrific looking preparations on which he had toiled. The operator was accustomed to attire himself, for these experiments in a dark dress which tightly fitted his gigantic form, and left his arms bare. His fiery eyes, cadaverous and strong features, set off by his black locks which streamed over his shoulders, must have rendered him a frightful picture. Before him, on the table, lay the body of Caroline, partially covered with a cloth, often before used for similar purposes, and here and there stained from the dead. Ebreson, who had hitherto been constrained to study from such revolting remnants as his elders might leave of his churchyard spoils, was gratified in attaining an entire figure, so recently deprived of life. He had not attended Caroline's trial, though he had listened with a sad, shuddering interest, to the account of her early crimes and punishment. He commenced his examination. The limbs were scarce yet rigid; and when he bared the face, he observed that the manner of her death had neither blackened nor distorted it; for the first time he was aware of her identity with one he had seen walk the world in maiden pride, oft he had inclined to ask the young thing's name. He knew it now—and half forgetting his art, sighed forth: "Had she been as good as she was fair, this is not a breast which I could lacerate."

He turned away to make some preparation for his horrid work, when a heavy sigh, which seemed to bear upon its breath the word "Mercy!" recalled him to the side of Caroline; he seized her wrist, a feeble fluttering pulse vibrated thrillingly to his touch.

She opened her eyes, gazed around her, saw the surgeon, and all his accompanying horrors. She sprang from the board and threw herself at his feet; her own disarray affected her not, the feelings of this world she believed had passed forever; but in the most earnest accents she articulated: "I know not whether I am in the presence of God or the devil, but I am innocent!" "INNOCENT!" repeated Ebreson, in the sepulchral voice. "Yes!" she continued, wringing her hands, "in pity torture me not! or say that this dismal place is but purgatory—that I do deserve, for I did carry a knife about me that I might put an end to my own life, rather than be his: but of the crime for which I suffered, he knows me guiltless; and thou, terrible being, can'st read in my soul that I speak the truth. Oh! thou look'st just, this will not last eternally. Spare, save me! and I will worship thee!"

Such an appeal in such circumstances, and under such a delusion, could not for a moment be doubted. Ebreson, in a transport of gratitude, poured over that dear bruised throat the vinegar which he kept at hand as a disinfector, weeping forth, "Be calm, my child! and fear me not—you are with a fellow-creature, who believes and will protect you. This earth and the life so miraculously preserved, shall yet be endeared to you."

Instantly screening her limbs from the chill air, he led her to his own room, consigned her to bed, and brought her food and wine, while his servant slept; and would have left her to rest, but that her state still bordered on delirium; so he sat all night like an elder brother, beside her. But now, what was to be done? To announce her existence to the world, cruelly as it had used her, and branded as was her lowly name, might but provoke fresh persecution; she had no power to prove the crimes of Gortz; her new benefactor's assertion of her innocence would not have impressed others with a like conviction: for Ebreson was, as yet, an obscure and needy man. The only course left for her was to fly, call herself something else, and in a distant part of the country live in retirement; but how could she gain a living, while unable to mix with her kind? Ebreson resolved never to abandon her; he could toil for them both. He would trust no one with his secret. Caroline, he thought, would no longer be exclusively his, if he shared the knowledge of her life with his dearest friend. He had one brother in the place, a Catholic curé. Locking up his treasure, he stole out ere dawn, awakened this holy man and borrowed all his money by telling him that debts and some quarrel, consequent on a hasty marriage, forced him to change his name and residence. The priest charged himself with forwarding all goods. Ebreson then hired a swift conveyance, bade Caroline array herself in his attire, packed up his books, instruments and wardrobe and started.

When his servant rose the curé was ready to account for everything. Ebreson found in this poor Caroline such intellect and virtue that he married her. The good curé settled with them, and they knew not what had become of Gortz, save that he had left the theater of his wickedness. One night Frere Basil entered their abode with a face of dismay, "Brother," he said, "I come from a shocking sight—the deathbed of a departing sinner. I was called in to administer the consolations of religion to an aged man, who has not long resided here. He will have no physician, though the people about him think he cannot see another sunrise; yet poverty is not the sole cause of his recklessness. He refused the last sacrament, calling himself unworthy of it; so I hastened to secure your charitable aid." "What is the unhappy patient's name?" asked the wife. "Gortz, sister." "Now, all gentle saints be praised!" she cried. "No questions, brother; our neighbor, the notary must accompany us all. Pray heaven we are not too late!" This party accordingly hurried to the wretched abode of the dying man. As they entered his chamber they heard him rave: "Talk not to me of sealed confessions—the whole world gaped on her degradation, and I have wandered for twenty years, like the accursed, undying Israelite; still no rest from that thought. I can give ye nothing, mercenaries. If ye find any gold, bury it at the gallows foot, or lay it out in masses—but no! no hopes of pardon for thy murderer, innocent Lina."

Caroline drew aside his curtain. At first he stared without recognition. When she called him by name, believing that he beheld her spirit, he coweringly hid his face; but she, removing his hand from his face, whispered: "Peter Gortz, take courage, I bring you peace and pardon. You are no murderer. The queen of heaven enabled her true servant wondrously to save me from death, and you from despair. I am a happy wife and mother. Yonder is my husband, come to serve you if he can."

The moment Gortz was assured of her life, he started up, and retributive justice again begged for one hour's—for but one half hour's breath. "Some potent restorative;" he cried, "my poor girl's fame must be cleared all to the world, and as much atonement made as wealth can do." The draught was given; the notary was ready. To him, Peter deposed that, believing Caroline thought herself entirely dependent, and in his power, her rejection to his suit, and threats of departure, had stung him to vindictive madness. She told him that she had packed up, ready to set forth with the first light, and insisted on leaving the house to seek a conveyance, telling him that she had left her trunk open; he might search it if he would, for she had stolen nothing. These brave words gave his hitherto indefinite desire for revenge a feasible shape; and, during her absence, he had actually sewn into her raiment the plate and money, which he had concealed at the bottom of her box, leaving it apparently just as he found it; and when she returned, bidding her farewell with a semblance of relenting, ere he retired for the night. Having made this statement, he formally consigned the whole of his long hoarded wealth to her, and sank into a peaceful slumber, from which he never awoke in this world.

To The Public.

I WOULD HEREBY CALL THE ATTENTION of the public to the fact, that on the first of May, 1864, they will be called upon by the United States Assessors, to make statement of Income for the year 1863, and as the year 1863 is just ended, it would be well for every one to make up their accounts for said year, while every thing is fresh in their memory, and be ready to make statement when called upon by the Assessor.

Under the ruling of the Commissioner of Internal revenue, persons can only deduct expenses for repairs, etc., from the amount received from the same property on which such expenditure have been made. For instance—a person receives $500 for rents, he can use of that amount all that is necessary to repair such property, from which rents were derived; the same rule applies to steamboats, saw mills, and other like property. But all monies derive from interest on notes, Bonds, Mortgages, and from dividends, must be returned as Income, although a portion of the whole has been expended in repairing buildings, steamboats, etc.

If persons will prepare their accounts and statements showing amounts received and the source from whence derived, amount expended, and for what purpose, then with the forms and blanks which will be furnished them by the Assessor, a correct return can be made.
